Community Development & Environmental Awareness A Two-Day Workshop for New England Communities

Tuesday, July 15 - Wednesday, July 16, 2008

Grappone Conference Center * Marriott Courtyard * 70 Constitution Avenue (near to I-93) *
Concord, New Hampshire 03301

Day 1: Economic Development through Brownfields Revitalization

Brownfields redevelopment can help create local jobs and spur downtown revitalization projects by attracting private investment. Learn how to identify brownfields, finance cleanup activities and turn a contaminated property into a source of economic vitality for your community.

Who Should Attend:

Community developers, regional planners, local/county governments, economic developers, non-profits, environmental consultants and private firms involved in downtown revitalization projects or cleanup of contaminated properties.

Tentative Topics to be Covered:

- How to fund your brownfields project (state and federal brownfields programs)
 - Making brownfields projects run more smoothly – organization, techniques, and tools
 - Creative brownfields practices and success stories

Day 2: Green Concepts for a Regional Economy

Learn how green practices can lead to economic development in your region. With rising gas prices and growing concerns about energy security, this workshop will help New England communities identify steps that can be taken at the local level for building a sustainable economy.

Who Should Attend:

Regional development organizations, local elected and appointed officials, business and industry, community leaders and developers, legislators, agribusinesses, farmers, environmental professionals, federal and state officials, regional planners, students, economic developers, tribes and non-profit organizations.

Tentative Topics to be Covered:

- Role of development organizations in regional approaches to renewable energy
- Developing a workforce for green collar jobs
- Making green building cost-effective
- Encouraging growth of green businesses - Finding capital in a down market

Registration Fee (includes continental breakfast and lunch):

Two Day Pass: $90.00
One Day Pass: $50.00
