Executive Director of the Walkable and Livable Communities Institute

Gary Toth

Director, Transportation Initiatives with the Project for Public Spaces

"...walkable and livable communities are harder to build than conventional communities. More collaboration is needed and many who have been schooled in city making (engineers, architects, planners, and landscape architects) have not been given all of the tools, or in some cases, they have the wrong tools. We provide inspiration, training, connections and support that give communities the tools and skills they need to first envision and then implement their dreams." Dan Burden
